Declaration

Whereas, it is important to give Utah's children hope by increasing their inner strength in order to overcome adversity and believe in their ability to succeed;

Whereas, Resilient Utah connects homes, schools, and communities to promote resiliency skills to parents and their children;

Whereas, it is essential to teach children to be resilient and make positive and healthy choices, including staying away from alcohol and other drugs, tobacco, violence and crime;

Whereas, the 2020-21 Resilient Utah Education Shield Awards will be presented to select schools and educators as a part of Resilient Utah Month;

Whereas, Resilient Utah Month is presented by Resilient Utah and KUTV Channel 2, with partners: Utah Family Partnership Network, Something Good Inc., Salt Lake Bees, Pukrufus and other supporting organizations; and,

Whereas, it is crucial to communicate to our children that we, as a community and government, are committed to building resilience in children and families;

Now, Therefore, I, Spencer J. Cox, governor of the great state of Utah, do hereby declare May 2021, as

Resilient Utah Month
